EMKA 43 - Bianca 414: Exception

The EMKA 43 - Bianca 414 is a sailboat designed for demanding sailors looking for robustness, performance and comfort on the high seas. This model, built in Germany and derived from the famous Bianca 414, is recognized for its manufacturing quality and excellent sea qualities.

With its 12.50 meters in length, this sailboat combines elegance and solidity thanks to a reinforced polyester shell and a plan signed by the famous naval architect Elvstrøm & Kjærulff. Its slender figure and sloop rigging make it an ideal boat for large crossings as for coastal cruises.

There are some work in court: the ship is currently stored on the ground in a shipyard. The shell has been rid of its antifouling, revealing small surface osmosis blisters which are currently being treatment. The bridge was stripped of the teak, sanded, applied with epoxy, then the bridge was painted with an anti -slip and its controlled seal. All of the Passe-Coque and valve have been replaced, and the shell was sanded and repainted. All damaged vaigrages have been redone, and the interior varnishes are being represented.

The bar system has been relieved by setting up stopping.

The assets of EMKA 43 - Bianca 414

?? Robust and sailor sailboat, designed for the sea

?? Good stability thanks to its important ballast

?? Warm and spacious interior, ideal for life on board

?? Optimal performance under sails, even in light winds

EMKA 43 - Bianca 414 is a sailboat that will seduce experienced browsers as well as long -distance cruise lovers. Its comfort, solidity and performance make it a safe bet on the market for large cruise sailboats.
